2. Describe your participation in the group presentation.

I worked as the organizer for the group, so I created the group chat, the shared word document, and our shared presentation. I initiated our meeting times outside of class and sent the Zoom link out. Xiaomei and I took notes during other groups' feedback time to help improve our presentation. I participated in brainstorming ideas with everyone, and we all shared resources we found with the group. I completed the research and created the part of the presentation for my section, History of Revival in North America. We got together to practice the presentation on 4/15 before presenting on 4/18.

3. How would you rate your participation in this group?

I feel good about my participation in the group! I think we all did a thorough job of coming to the table prepared and ready to do our part.

4. What was the most significant learning moment from this group activity?

We all wanted to ultimately pursue a message of hope for this presentation, and I love that we all rallied around that even if it was not part of our specific section. The main question we asked as we practiced and researched was if we were finding hope.

5. What were some challenges you experienced in this group activity?

Coordinating schedules to meet outside of class, forming a thesis with 5 different ways of thinking, and splitting up the presentation fairly based on the areas of research.
