

Orlando Martinez

Professor OHara

World Civ1

18 April 2023

Failures and success of the Mongols, the Mongols were very nomadic which could be viewed as a failure, also both men and women had to work. Uniting the Mongols proved to be very tough. Which required a civil war, you never want a civil war against the same people from the same country. The leader was a good leader which is a very good success for them. As the empire kept growing it was inevitably their evident death. What I learned is that this empire grew so big that it was all of the middle east, china and russia and that there are 16 million Direct descendants to Gehngus Khan which is insane and great thing to learn.