What made the film "Freedom Writers" worthwhile to watch is it all happened in a school setting and in an era where each student came from different back rounds and with different problems they each had to deal with and bring that pain to school with no one understanding them, they felt less and unproductive in school that didn't seem to care at the end of the day The safest place for a young person should be the home and going to school and having caring teachers that wanted to make a difference in that student's life and not be there to pass the day and ignoring the less fortunate ones it is about learning and seeing a student's potential and trying to help them progress and understand some struggles they face and when you have a teacher that can see you are trying it should not be a second thought on what a teacher can do to help a student out in the educational system they say it takes a village to raise a child and that is what this teacher did I enjoyed the movie it had heart and truth about what goes on in neighborhoods and in school but this teacher did not let the negativity stop her from what she was there in that school to do for she believed in herself enough to show what the students were capable of and began to understand what was going on in their life the movie had great actors in it and the fact that it was a true story made it worth seeing and I would watch it again or recommend it to anyone with interest and I found the music soundtrack matched the messages throughout the movie as well overall entertaining and well written.
