10 Point Response

Artist Development

Setting goals to help plan your music career success is well thought out, even though some people would still fail to meet them. The music business and creative goals help to bust your career because these goals help you focus on something instead of being all over the place with your thoughts and also have a sense of organization. Preparing ahead allows you to have time to plan something new and learn from what you already share with the listeners. Regarding Taylor's stages of artist development, exploring and renewing are the most important because they connect to one another. When you decide to renew your music or reconnect to what encourages them to become, a musician is like exploring yourself again and coming up with something new.
