

Electronic devices have many negative and positive health effects on young adults that are not talked about enough considering how big electronics are in today's world. The use of electronics before bed can lead to chronic sleep deprivation, which can have serious health consequences. Therefore, it is important for young adults to limit their use of electronics before bed and prioritize their sleep hygiene to maintain their overall health and well being. Electronics are not bad but if they aren't used properly they can be.