Body section 1

Claim: Children should be allowed to have phones because it provides "safety"

What if they get lost or trapped somewhere? There is a great percentage that they can receive safety with a phone. Not saying that the phone is God. However it is a great electronic device for safety. The phone provides them to call, text or silently send out an alert to either their parents or surrounding areas. If there is an emergency whether big or small with a phone they have the opportunity to reach out and get help. Also depending on the phone there are apps where you can track where you are and send it to someone to come find you.

Body section 2

Claim: Children should be allowed to have phones because it builds effective communication.

On a day to day basis children go to school, play dates and do homework. Having a mobile device can teach them how to build effective communication although yes they can be afforded the opportunity to be in an environment where they can build friendships and memories. With a phone it teaches them independence when it comes down to how to communicate with others

Body section 3

Claim: Children should be allowed to have phones because it encourages them to have a sense of responsibility

We all know that some phones can be expensive and as a person who aspires to be a parent you would think to get your child the best phone. Well phones can be easily broken if not properly taken care of. This gives the child the perfect opportunity to be taught how to be responsible. This indicates that they are solely responsible to look after something that they own with care. If anything happens to it
