

Christian Nursing Worldview Essay

Jade Budhai

Alliance University

Nursing World View

4/24/2023

Christian Nursing Worldview Essay

Introduction

Coming from a Christian family, I believe that Christian faith and conviction that God is the origin of everything excellent and right forms the foundation of the worldview. In addition, he is the one who created everything and is thus the rightful owner of everything. I view nursing as a vocation to serve and care for others in a manner that glorifies God since I view health as a gift. The belief in redemption via Jesus Christ and the significance of trust in Him is at the heart of the worldview. The belief is sustained by compliance and devotion to the will of God, as well as by the aspiration to lead a moral life, which entails seeking forgiveness, acknowledging personal failings, and demonstrating compassion for other people.

The worldview stresses the need to treat patients holistically in the context of nursing practice, considering their body and emotional and spiritual needs. The perspective acknowledges that people are more than biological creatures who yearn for meaning and purpose in life. The sanctity of human life, involving preserving it from conception to death from natural causes, is highly valued in the Christian worldview (Okyere-Manu et al., 2022). The viewpoint has ramifications for nursing practice since it calls for nurses to respect each patient's value and dignity, regardless of age, color, gender, or health status. Generally, the Christian world perspective is outlined by belief in God, conformity to His will, and pursuing a moral life that involves forgiving others, confessing and repenting one's sins, and acting with love and compassion for others different from oneself. Lastly, this worldview strongly emphasizes nursing practice, treating patients holistically, respecting the sanctity of life, and providing care that glorifies God.

Explanation of The World View

Christians are firm believers in God through Jesus Christ, arguing that God is the creator of the universe and everything in it, the legitimate owner of everything, and that human beings are just custodians of his belongings. All that is good and right comes from God, who also gives human existence meaning and purpose. This view holds that God is a living, personal entity that longs to interact with people. The Christian worldview holds that each individual is a unique creation of God, fashioned in His likeness and endowed with dignity and value (Sullivan, 2021). Christians recognize every person as a unique creation from God and are thus supposed to be treated as equals regarding race, gender, and social status. It is also believed that people are spiritual creatures needing restoration and salvation. Christians believe that the almighty gave the earth to humans for them to guard and make good use of it by cultivating and improving its productivity. Consequently, the earth provides a home and refuge for man.

Christians believe that people are expected to be responsible and accountable for their activities toward the environment and that the natural world symbolizes God's beauty and creation (Buxton et al., 2021). God's blessings of health and well-being are revered, and nursing is considered a calling to serve and care for others in a way that exalts Him. The healthcare sector and practitioners must provide a holistic approach to satisfy human spiritual, emotional, and physical needs. In addition to preventing sickness, being healthy also involves fostering general well-being. The role of nurses in God's healing and restoration is crucial. Moreover, nurses are expected to be just and fair in their line of work and deliver effective patient service without discrimination in age, race, social status, or financial status (Borras, 2020). The sanctity of human life must be upheld by nurses, who must safeguard it from conception until natural death.

Comparison with the Bible

According to the Bible, the ultimate creator and owner of everything is God, and we are only His stewards (Psalm 24:1-2). However, we are responsible for caring for God's creation. According to Genesis 1:27, God created each individual in his likeness, and he was pleased; thus, everyone is unique, and humans are vital and loved in God's eyes. According to John 3:16 and Romans 3:23-24, individuals are spiritual creatures needing redemption and restoration via trust in Jesus Christ. In addition, Christians are instructed to help and care for the sick, vulnerable, elderly, or in need of aid by the Bible to be rewarded, as explained in the parable of the sheep and the goats (Matthew 25:35-36). The Bible also emphasizes that this assistance must be delivered with love and compassion, as written in 1 Corinthians 13:4-7.

Moreover, James 5:14-16 highlights the importance of healthcare practitioners treating individuals holistically by considering their physical, emotional, and spiritual requirements. Another vital theme captured in the Bible is the sacredness of human life, depicting how God created and formed humans in the womb and knew their fate before they were even born. (Psalm 139:13-16). Additionally, 1 John 1:9 and Matthew 6:14-15 teach that spiritual well-being and a closer connection with God require forgiveness, confession, and repentance. In 1 Peter 1:14-16, the apostle Peter writes that Christians must lead moral lives that praise God and endeavor to obey His will. Concurring with Genesis 2:15 of the Book of the Bible, we must care for everything, including the land and environment and everything on it, counting the environment.

Conclusion: Effect on Nursing Practice

The Christian worldview has the potential to substantially influence the clients' health and the decision-making processes they go through. Christians consider their health to be a gift from God; thus, they are more inclined to treat their bodies with respect and make healthy living a priority in their lives, which can be very crucial in providing patient education. During sickness or hardship, they may also seek the direction and solace of spiritual sources, which may benefit their mental and emotional health. In addition, the Christian worldview emphasizes the sanctity of human life and the worth and dignity of every person, which can affect clients' decisions, especially concerning ethical medical procedures and care provided toward the end of life. Clients who adhere to the Christian faith may have strong convictions on the significance of life preservation and may be less inclined to choose options that may speed up the dying process.

Nurses are responsible for respecting their clients' religious views and values, as the views depict that everyone is unique (Swihart & Martin, 2022). Nurses should employ a holistic method when caring for patients, considering the client's physical, emotional, and spiritual requirements. It is of the utmost importance to deliver clients compassionate care that respects the sanctity of human life and recognizes their worth and dignity to bring them to a more stable mental state that hastens the treatment process. In addition, nurses are expected to be aware of the possible spiritual needs of their Christian patients and provide chances for their patients to receive spiritual support and direction, which may entail making arrangements for visits from a chaplain or providing tools for prayer or meditation to individuals.

References

- Borras, A. M. (2020). Toward an Intersectional Approach to Health Justice. International Journal of Health Services, 002073142098185.
<https://doi.org/10.1177/0020731420981857>
- Buxton, G., Luetz, J. M., & Shaw, S. (2021). Towards an Embodied Pedagogy in Educating for Creation Care. Springer EBooks, pp. 349–375. https://doi.org/10.1007/978-981-15-8856-3_20
- Okyere-Manu, B., Morgan, S. N., & Nwosimiri, O. (2022). Cultural, ethical, and religious perspectives on environment preservation. Best Practice & Research Clinical Obstetrics & Gynaecology. <https://doi.org/10.1016/j.bpobgyn.2022.09.004>
- Sullivan, J. (2021). Catholics, Culture and the Renewal of Christian Humanism. Religions, 12(5), 325. <https://doi.org/10.3390/rel12050325>
- Swihart, D. L., & Martin, R. L. (2022, November 14). Cultural Religious Competence In Clinical Practice. Nih.gov; StatPearls Publishing.
<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/books/NBK493216/>