Chapter 11

15) The author framed the chapter around three questions, “where am I”? “Where am I trying to go and how can I get there?” How do you answer these questions from the way you approach your intended profession?

The answer to the three questions where am I, Where am I trying to go and how can I get there? I

Will answer with I am working on bettering myself as a person with an education and I am

Trying to be stronger to help others find there way in life and how can I get there? These Things will be done with support and hard work. I will ask these questions to my clients

And help them sole search and guide them through life and help them figure out who they Want to be.

19) American colleges like Harvard and Yale which were founded in Christian assumptions,

Gradually drifted away from there historical roots to point where some of them embody

Anti-Christian sentiments is the drift inevitable? How can we keep a Christian world view while Exploring diversity of secular disciplines and theories?

As the response to this we need to bring back some religious history to schools to students so

They can understand how the world works and how it came about. Religion is not a bad thing

To have in education and I feel we need to bring some back as it is important that we learn

Religion to help us in all situations as our world is changing. We can bring back religion in

Colleges and still educate our students at the same time even those who are not religious. Lastly

I do not feel it is a bad thing to have some religion in education and still explore our world.
