4. Some good combinations of music careers would be a music educator and artist. I believe that this is a good combination, because a person would be able to sharpen their skills as a musician while teaching others to do the same. This benefits both the artist and those that are learning from them.

5. A successful musician that I admire is Simiane. She is a French gospel singer who started singing in the church, and now makes her own music, travels the world to perform and do live concerts, and makes music videos. I believe her service in singing in church and serving under different ministries is what made her who she is today.
