I CAN'T WAIT FOR SPRING TO COME!

I'm tired of winter. I'm tired of snow, I'm tired of cold weather, and I'm sick and tired of winter coats and boots! Just think! In a few more weeks it won't be winter any more. It'll be spring. The weather won't be cold. It'll be warm. It won't snow any more. It'll be sunny. I won't have to stay indoors any more. I'll go outside and play with my friends. We'll ride bicycles and play baseball again.

In a few more weeks our neighborhood won't look sad and gray any more. The flowers will bloom, and the trees will become green again. My family will spend more time outdoors. My father will work in the yard. He'll cut the grass and paint the fence. My mother will work in the yard, too. She'll buy new flowers and plant them in the garden. On weekends we won't just sit in the living room and watch TV. We'll go for walks in the park, and we'll have picnics on Sunday afternoons.

I can't wait for spring to come! Hurry, spring!

WRITING Your Invitation You're inviting the students in your class to a party. What kind of party are you having? When is the party? Where is it going to be? Make an invitation.

Dinner Invitations Around the World

Some friends invited you to their home for dinner. When should you arrive? How much should you eat? When should you leave? The answers to these questions depend on the country you're in. Different countries have different rules and traditions.

In the United States, punctuality (being on time) is very important. When people invite you to their home for dinner, they usually give an exact time, for example, "We're having dinner at 6:30." You should plan to arrive on time or just a little late. If you're going to be more than fifteen minutes late, you need to call.

Punctuality is also important in Sweden, Norway, and other Scandinavian countries. However, in countries in South America and in Italy and Spain, a guest can arrive half an hour late for a dinner invitation. In most countries, it isn't a good idea to arrive early in case the hosts who are making the dinner aren't ready for their guests.

Food is a very important part of any invitation to someone's home in the countries of the Middle East.

When someone offers you something to eat or drink, it's impolite to say "no". But you don't have to finish everything. In fact, when your plate is empty, your host will serve you more right away. So when you're full, stop eating and leave something on your plate. This is very different from France, Austria, and Japan, where it's important to finish everything on your plate to show your host that you liked the food. In Italy and Turkey, you don't have to finish everything, but if you do and you're still hungry, it's polite to ask for more.

It's important to know when to arrive for dinner, but it's also important to know when to leave! In India, Europe, and North America, it's very impolite to leave right after you eat. You don't want your hosts to think that you came to their home only for the food. On the other hand, in some Asian and Central American countries, it's polite to leave right after dessert. If you stay, the hosts might think you're still hungry and there wasn't enough food.

- It's important to be on time in _____.
 - Italy
 - Spain
 - Norway
 - Brazil
- It's polite to leave right after dinner in some countries in _____.
 - Europe
 - North America

 - Central America
- When dinner is at 7:30 P.M. in the United States, it's polite to arrive _____.
 - more than fifteen minutes late
 - at 7:40 P.M.
 - at 7:50 P.M.
 - at 7:15 P.M.
- _____ is a Scandinavian country.
 - India
 - The United States
 - Sweden
 - Austria
- Finish everything on your plate in _____, or your host will think you don't like the food.
 - Austria
 - Italy
 - Turkey
 - the Middle East
- According to this article, in the Middle East, it's important to _____.
 - be on time
 - leave right after dinner
 - eat everything on your plate
 - say "yes" when someone offers food
